Twenty Fourth Sunday in Ordinary Time

“This man welcomes sinners and eats with them.” Complaining with what they considered a harsh insult, the Pharisees and scribes make a profoundly ironic statement, unrecognized by themselves, but surely comprehended by anyone who hears the Gospel. Jesus’ welcoming sinners and eating with them is a joyful proclamation of the good news, but the Pharisees regard such actions as shockingly scandalous. The Pharisees and scribes are so dismissive of Jesus that they do not even refer to him by name. Although they talk about “this man,” rather than to him, Jesus addresses them directly. “What is lost has been found and that is joy. Their joy must be shared, so they invite friends and neighbors to celebrate the finding of what was lost.

The pattern of the two parables is thus loss, searching, finding, rejoicing, and sharing of the joy. Finally, each episode is compared to the joy over one repentant sinner. The saying about a repentant sinner indicates that both the shepherd and the woman are images for the God who rejoices at the finding of each sinner restored to sheepfold and household.
